How to Make A Wish

Blake, Ashley Herring

Book-2012

Grace, tough and wise, has nearly given up on wishes, thanks to a childhood spent with her unpredictable, drinks-too-much mother Maggie. Then Grace meets Eva, a girl who believes in dreams in spite of her own difficulties in life. When Eva tells Grace that she likes girls, Grace's world opens up and she begins to believe in happiness again. When Grace must choose between Maggie and Eva, will she give up the future for the life she has?

[1] In which field might A Time to Break Silence help its readers?

- A. Job hunting.
- B. Entertainment.
- C. Family life.
- D. Education.

[2] Which book may you want to read if you're interested in how one grows to be a success?

- A. A Time to Break silence.
- B. A Work in Progress.
- C. Dare Me.
- D. How to Make a wish.

[3] What do Dare Me and How to Make A Wish have in common?

- A. They're both about friendship.
- B. They both came out in 2017.
- C. They both have electronic copies.
- D. They're both easy to understand.

2. You have the ability to decide if you are happy or not. Happiness is a choice. You can't on someone else to make you happy.

You can choose your emotions(情感). True happiness comes from within; it can't be forced by outside forces. So how do you choose happiness? The same way you choose a new pair of shoes. When you're buying new shoes, you choose a pair that you like and feel good. You wouldn't buy a pair of shoes that you don't like or that don't fit well, right? You choose it because that's what you want to experience in your life. So why do we keep choosing emotions and feelings that don't make us feel good?

Choosing to be after you realize your anger has shown up can be beneficial. We choose our feelings; no one can do that for us. If we let others influence our emotions, we are giving them power over us. When others cause us anger or pain, we are giving them our power.

We need to keep in check our feelings and not react immediately to what is thrown at us. We need to think our actions out instead of just reacting to what someone says or does.

Remember that we can always choose happiness. At first it will be difficult to just change your thoughts and feelings from anger, self-doubt, or fear to joy and happiness. But it is only a thought away. Don't be lost in what happens to you unnecessarily but realize what is causing you to feel that way. Realize that thoughts, feelings and emotions can change. Then move on and choose to be happy.

3. When I first met George, I was in my early 30s. My children were just entering school life allowing me to escape from endless housework. At 65, George had recently left work and was seeking a rewarding hobby for his golden years. For both of us, we loved painting and we met at a local TAFE painting class. Thus began a friendship that was to last for 25 years —until the day he died.

George was an energetic man who lived life to the full. He loved his family, his friends, and was loyal and outspoken. As the only male in a painting class full of women, George quite enjoyed it. He ruled the roost(栖息处)and we were his hens. He loved his singular(单一的)role and looked after his hens with the same attention he gave to everything.

He took to painting with passion and devotion. He carefully housed his expensive painting tools a box—a red metal tool box—built to bear hard knocks. Not fancy, but smooth and shiny and very red.

In 2004, I learned that he was very ill and went to visit him. "He's very confused and may not recognize you," Penny, his daughter, warned. But as I bent over, George opened his eyes —"Bev!" he said, and with surprising strength, held my hand. "I've always been hoping to leave my box to you. I'm afraid I can't paint anymore, and you have the best talent and are most likely to use it," he said. With tears in my eyes, I accepted the gift on the proviso(附带条件)he could take it back at any time. He never did. He died two days later. Today I still use much of his equipment kept in the box. As I paint I big personality, generous spirit and unfailing encouragement. The box is still in good shape, very red. The original shop sticker is still firmly in place although the price has worn off.

But that's all right because to my mind something, like friendship, are beyond price.

[1] What does the author focus on in Paragraph 1?

- A. Difference in their ages.
- B. Reasons for their hobby.
- C. Beginning of their friendship.
- D. Time of George's death.

[2] How did the author feel about their painting class?

- A. It was love-filled.
- B. It was encouraging.
- C. It was unequal.
- D. It was difficult.

[3] What does the author intend to do in writing the text?

- A. Introduce a close friend.
- B. Honor the memories of a friend.
- C. Prove the importance of a hobby.
- D. Appreciate her friend's gift.

[4] What can be a suitable title for the text?

- A. Value of Devotion
- B. A Meaningful Life
- C. Keys to Friendship
- D. A Red Box

4. Researchers from the Institute for Human Machine succeeded in training a 165-pound human-like robot, called Atlas, to move across narrow blocks using a system called LIDAR.

At first sight, a robot walking across several blocks may look like a simple thing but many actions that humans can do easily are difficult for robots as heavy as Atlas.

Our joints (关节) and a natural balance system allow us to deal with different obstacles (障碍)easily. Besides, our small, narrow feet allow us to move around tight obstacles easily, or step over obstacles, while supporting ourselves.

With atlas, LIDAR uses a pulsed laser(脉冲激光器)to measure the distance between objects and this is done by the machine so it can step correctly on the blocks. It also builds a map of the area Atlas's going to travel across, and then uses a path planning algorithm(算法)'to determine each step it should take. The robot is able to balance with its human-like feet and joints which give it ranges(范围)of movement.

Presently Atlas is successful with about half of its tests, according to IHMC, but the company is already working to increase that rate by improving the robot's balance and the range of movement in its joints.

Perhaps the most interesting setting for using human-like robots is outer space. The team say that when humans explore other planets, robots like Atlas could go before that to develop a habitat suitable for human beings to live in. But researchers believe they would be immediately useful in dangerous emergency situation. Their ability to walk on different types of land could make them perfect for searching a fallen building or an earthquake for people trapped, where a wheeled robot would get stuck.

[1] Why is Atlas' weight mentioned?

- A.To show the success of the research.
- B.To compare Atlas with other robots
- C.To make readers interested in the topic.
- D.To tell how Atlas walks independently.

[2] What does Atlas depend on to keep balance?

- A.LIDAR.
- B.Its natural joints.
- C.Narrow blocks.
- D.Its weight.

[3] What can we learn about Atlas?

- A.It can easily walk across different obstacles.
- B.It is still under improvement.
- C.A pulsed laser decides each step it takes.
- D.It helps create a map of outer space.

[4] What might Atlas do in the distant future?

- A.Save lives in dangerous situations.
- B.Rebuild fallen houses
- C.Forecast earthquake.
- D.Explore possible living space.

5. Ways to Book the Cheapest Flights Possible

Unless you are one of those first-class fliers for whom money is not a problem, [1]. But ticket prices change every day, and your tickets could end up costing your whole vacation budget. Don't worry. With a little creativity and a lot of research, it is possible to fly affordably.

Plan Accordingly

If you do not have much flexibility(弹性)in your dates, buy your tickets at least 2-4 months in advance. [2]. Air fares will rise steadily as the time nears. However, if you have the flexibility to drop everything and go, last minute deals can save you much.

Set air fare Alerts(新知通告)

No matter when you start your planning, it can be helpful to set email alerts for flights to the destination(目的地)of your choice. There are generally recognized days when air fare is the cheapest(Tuesdays or Wednesdays), [3]. Sometimes the best deal will come through a surprise sale.

[4]

Yes, it is way more convenient to fly direct from your home airport to your destination. But this depending on where you live. Sometimes, purposely including a stopover can actually save you money.

Search Single Seats

It may be cheaper to buy each ticket individually(个人地)for the same flight, [5]. It works because airlines set different prices for different seats on the same plane! When a group of seats are sold together, the airline often charges the highest price among the group for all the seats.

A.Add A Stop.

B.Always Fly Non-stop.

C.even if you are traveling as a group.

D.but you can't necessarily rely on that.

E.you don't want to spend more than you have to on air fare.

F.That might mean you begin researching 4-6 months ahead.

G.That way you'll have plenty of time to get prepared for the trip.

6. 在下列句中空白处填入适当的内容(一个单词)或括号内单词的适当形式。

[1] It is the driver rather than the passengers who _____(be)to blame for the accident.

[2] _____my brother, who likes reading quietly, I enjoy sports.

[3] We must make full use of the _____(limit)time to get everything ready.

[4] We find _____puzzling that he always pretends to know what he doesn't.

[5] Towards evening, we arrived at _____was called The Ghost Village.

[6] _____(fortunate), Henry was spotted by a ship and brought to England safely.

书面表达

1. Dear Terry ,

Our school is organizing a social practice in Southeast Flowers Garden next weekend. I'm writing to invite you to join us.

We'll work on a small field where we can grow flowers and vegetables. If you take part, not only will you experience the pleasure of being close to nature but also enjoy the rewards of your hard work in the future. Additionally, by communicating more with Chinese students, you can improve your spoken Chinese and also make some friends. If you accept the invitation, we're to meet at our school gate at 8:00 a. m. next Saturday. Do come to the social practice. We are sure to have fun. Looking forward to your early reply.

Yours,

Li Hua.
